ERT
Since its foundation in 1983, the 45-member European Roundtable of industrialists has exerted a decisive influence over the European Commission's policy-making. Working as well as the former Competitiveness Advisory Group (CAG) and specialized lobbying groups such as the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe (AMUE, still active). The group's ongoing influence is reflected in the 1993 White Paper "Lisbon" action plan, which includes the further liberalization and privatization of energy, transport, telecommunication and postal services, markets as well as neoliberal reforms of labour markets and pension systems.

The group's ongoing influence is reflected in the 1993 White Paper "Lisbon" action plan, which includes the further liberalization and privatization of energy, transport, telecommunication and postal services, markets as well as neoliberal reforms of labour markets and pension systems. The ERT's corporations has a direct interests in the continous growth of transport in Europe. at companies. The commission funded many ERT's activities on transport issues, included the ERT's 1994 report "Missing Links: Trans-European Infrastructure in Europe. The ERT was participating in the official Motorway Working Group, which put together the Trans European Road Network (TERN) projects.
